

WEDNESDAY 14th December

“Of the 5,339 documented species of mammals that are alive today, a quarter are threatened with extinction in the wild ...”

<http://www.dawn.com/2011/08/17/time-for-new-strategy-to-save-mammals-say-biologists.html>

The international Union for the Conservation of Nature said that the Western Black Rhino of Africa, a species related to Black Rhinos, is officially extinct. The group says two other subspecies of rhinoceroses are close to meeting the same fate: the Northern White Rhino of Central Africa and the Javan Rhino in Vietnam.

Jacques Flamand of WWF South Africa, checks a Black Rhino after its release in South Africa pic courtesy Green Renaissance/ World Wildlife Fund

Intent:

The Black Rhino as a species can still be saved today please tune in to the soul energy of the Black Rhino that exist on the land mass of Africa. Try to feel their energy within your own being as you acknowledge their existence and send them loving positive thoughts.

Please make sure you DO NOT send energies that “feel sorry” for them! This is an exercise in creation, the feeling you want to achieve is successful bountiful life, through love.

WEDNESDAY 21st December

This website <http://www.earth.webecs.co.uk/> looks at the long term trends in earthquakes and summarises that although the frequency of all earthquakes recorded is increasing the reason is partly the number of seismographic recording stations on the planet. BUT even after taking that into account, it also states: “earthquakes across the planet show a marked increase in activity since 1997. There are more major earthquakes occurring now, and this on an ever more frequent basis.”

As if we had any doubt, Gaia, our Earth Mother, is changing. Her ability to flex her skin is part of what has enabled her to be humanity’s home for millennia. Her change, climate change, social change and our change are inextricably linked in an holistic pattern that we cannot hope to fathom with logic.

Intent

We will continue to assist our Mother through these physical changes as she trembles and releases energy. So today focus thoughts of peace and acceptance, born from your true loving soul centre, and connect those emotions to the spiritual centre of the earth; find that place inside yourself that you associate as reflecting the outer world.... It is the centre of your vision, the centre of your being, it is the place that is tied to the giving centre of the Earth Mother on the universal subtle level. This is the point of highest vibration: the spark of creation, the original source.... “God”... We and all living things nurture such a point deep within. It is not referenced by time and space. This is not a material thing; this is not a physical thing, this is a fleeting glimpse of the ultimate subtle world; the original energy, the original spark of love. You will not feel it, you will not see it, you will simply know it for the briefest of moments. But that is enough. Know it and nurture it.